HANNA'S WORK BEARS MARK OF A SINCERE REFORMER

Dead Statesman Is Eulogized by Minister in a Sermon on Prophecy.

TOO MUCH INSINCERITY

So-called "reformers" were arraigned by the Rev. J. Cumming Smith during the by the name of "Polly Pry." She is well course of his sermon at the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. Taking for his theme "The Soul's Prophecy," the pastor drew a picture of the typical self-made man, who, having forced is way to the front in his chosen line of work, looks back over the path he has trod in his struggle to the front and forward into the unknown future, but fails to appreciate the beauty of the picture through

"He says I," the speaker said. "But the. use of that pronoun determines a man's reatness. The average man of this type he type from which reformers so-called, usually spring, use the personal pronoun egotistically, offensively and persistently." He said in part: "I have fought'—this is the martial sort. He felt that things were wrong and God set him to put them right. This is the necessity of the genuine reformer, who cannot rest amid discord in state or inequity in trade or hypocrisy in church or deception slow-eating into social Iffe any more than a mother can rest on a serene pillow when cries issue from the cradle. The world prickles with injustices. Despotisms abound in every realm.

"There are not wanting demonstrations of an unequal or misdivided civilization. It is the best age so far, but much more work must be done to save the world from wreck and the trumpet call for heroes is never "Nevertheless there are reformers who are false even while they glory in expos-ing the falsity of others. What is the brand mark of a reliable leader in alteradons and amendments on even constitutional charges?

It is the virtue of intense aim and achievement in the man who aspires to make change. It is not the lazy dreamer at home in soft, silken ease who loves to sketch ideal conditions; it is not the mere theorist on paper; it is not the failure in life-mad at failure and wreaking revenge by harping on the world's wrongs; it is rather the man who is ardent along the line of the world's work, who is a part of the wing he tries to mend and who feels that not alone is he himself foiled, carries weight when he carries a reform. "Such was Mr. Hanna. He was not lumin ous in all directions nor was he free from the errors that inhere in us all as human. We will gauge his worth more truly if we try to place him. He was the representative of the commercialistic era in our history. Here his judgment was almost infallible. If he had never moved outside that domain he would have gone down to the grave unmourned save by his kindred. His eminent greatness, however, lay in this: That while forceful in business, while master of markets, he expanded into a reformer. He widened out from the moneymaking enthusiasm to the patriotic campaign. He tried to heal wounds and bridge chasms. He sought to reconcile capital and labor that in any true state must lock "And whatever suggestions he made toward this desired truce on amalgamation of the true forces carried weight because he had won spurs in actual commerce. He was a great man chiefly because the working classes felt when he fell that they had st a friend; a wise, far-sighted, keenved adviser in the most momentous probem of our modern world, the harmonizaion of the two classes engaged in developing the world's resources.

Hence Paul, in his own life, was a true, reliable reformer because he was himsell thick in the fray. 'He was 'racing on the course.' He had intensity of nature and he belonged to the actual world. He loved it. To him it was not a dungeon, but a theater of genius and effort. To him it was not the plague spot of creation, but a possible palace with marble floors that required to be swept and cleaned. He spoke home to men just because men felt instinctively that he was sympathy with human life and saw divine side, which they saw but could not voice as he could voice it.'

CANNON HISTORY OF MOVEMENT

> The theory that "discontent is the source of progress" may well be applied to the creation and growth of Das Deutsche Haus. Inspired with a desire to widen the extent and nature of its work, and realizing that its quarters were inadequate for such undertakings, the Social Turnverein Club started plans ten years ago whereby the present $170,000 structure, at Michigan street and Massachusetts avenue, was completed.

The movement that led to the erection of the present German House, and whose tenth anniversary is being celebrated today and night, was promoted by some of the most prominent and prosperous Germans of Indianapolis. It was started for the purpose of not only furnishing a clubhouse, but a home for all German-Americans in the city and all others who wished to join for such a purpose. A stock company was formed, and shares were sold at $100, payable in eight years. The disposal of enough shares to insure the undertaking was at first a difficult task, but persistency finally won out.

COMPANY FINALLY FORMED. The stock company was incorporated at $160,000, with three hundred members, among whom the following were some of the heaviest stockholders: Henry Schnull, Herman Lieber, Jacob Metzger, William Haueisen, Frederick Bachman, August Kipp, Robert Keller, Julius Keller, Albrecht Kipp, Clemens Vonnegut and August Kuhn. The money on hands from subscriptions to stock was not sufficient to begin the erection of the building, and a loan was made from one of the banks in the city for $40,000, which was secured by the personal indorsement of the directors.

Later it became necessary to make a loan for $60,000, which was made from one of the insurance companies, and was again secured by the personal indorsement of the directors of the organization. In its ten years' existence it has not only paid the current expenses, but has paid all but $45,000 of its indebtedness and kept up

They have, however, insisted that they be relieved, but without avail. The directors are Herman Lieber, president; William Haueisen, vice president; Albrecht Kipp, refinancial secretary, and Henry Schnull, treasurer. It is through the management of these men that the success of the organization has been so pronounced. The German House is the only one of its kind in the country in that it affords a nome not only for its members, but for the families as well. ELEVEN CONVERSIONS AT GOSPEL MEETING

Taking his text from John iii, 16, "For Evangelist Tests Assertion by Testimony of Men in the Congregation.

> A remarkable meeting was held at the Meridian-street M. E. Church last evening, in the series of evangelistic services now being conducted there. The church was nearly filled with an audience three-fourths of which were men, a very unusual condition, especially as no special attempt had been made to draw men to it. Evangelist Crossley preached on "Conversion," and at the end of his powerful address fourteen men rose for prayers, and eleven of these afterward went forward and professed con-

In the course of his sermon the Rev. Mr. Crossley made the statement that when a person gets beyond thirty years of age the probabilities are strong against his conversion. To test this statement the standing testimony of the Christians in the audience was taken. None was found who had been converted when past fifty years of age, two between the ages of forty and fifty eleven between thirty and forty, twentyone between twenty and thirty, and over two hundred before the age of twenty.

is with some degree of pride that the Journal announces the coming of its new Art Supplement series. These pictures are exact facsimile reproductions of the paintings of such famous artists as Meissonier, Corot, Henner, Webber, Richter and others as well known. They have been pronounced by the most critical judges the richest and most expensive set of pictures that have ever been offered by a newspaper in this country. In obtaining these subjects the publishers overcame almost insurmountable obstacles in procuring the right to their use. The fact that the owners intended reserving them for art stores exclusively, and that they were never used in this or any other country, made this extremely difficult. In carrying this plan out the Journal is only pursuing its well-defined policy of giving its patrons

the newest and best without regard to cost.
